NOT YET FINANCIAL LUNATICS.

Notwithstanding the free silver wave that scens to be rolling over the country the American people Lave too much sens to attempt binetallism without European cooperation. The advocates of extional free silver can not be sincere, for no same person would deliberately lead a people into disaster and distress, and overwhelm industries and trade with financial rule,

There can be no such thing as rational bimetallism. National free silver would drive gold to a premium and gold payments would have to be suspended. This would necessitate silver payments and the adoption of a siver standard. Prices would rise in sympathy with our depreciated money, gold would cease to circulate and would have to be obtained from usurious brokers. Capital would be withdrawn from investments, trade would suffer from want of demand, stocks would depreciate, and a general upheaval would take place in every branch of business.

No sensible person could desire such an unsettled condition of affairs. It could result in nothing but financial revolution, which would end in a panic and bankruptcy No country has ever yet tried such a mad experiment, nor will the United States do so unless its people are stricken with financial lunney. And surely that misfortune has not yet happened.

NO EXTRA SESSION.

It is absolutely ridiculous to charge the President with contemptating an extra ses sion of Congress to gain an affeged party advantage. It is no trifling matter to assemic so important a body, and only one come deration could induce Mr. Cleveland. the President, tomake such a move. Should a financial emergency arise, or a war imnecessary, that body should be assembled.

This calls up the question of newspaper emahility. Exaggerated accounts of every bit of gessip caught up on the street is no only harmful to the reputation of a paper, but is necessarily mislending to its readers. Not every news item can be verified, and there is a moral responsibility testing on the editor who decides its importance Should the Bern appear impracticable on its face and incapable of verification, it should be suppressed without reference to m sementional value.

The true newspaper is the one that instructs without destroying confidence, that leads without mideading, that gives facts without exaggeration, and that poblishes the truth without resorting to sensational subterfuge. Such a paper with fair business management was always succeed.

AN INTOLERABLE NUISANCE. Assistant District Attorney Davall has of ficially advised the District Commissioners that the Belt Line Railroad Company Fano right to maintain a public nuisance by stabling its horses on O street, or any other street, for that matter. He has further advised the Commissioners that by doing so the company lays itself limble to criminal prosecution

There is nothing specially new or interest ing in this information, for it is not supposable that a corporation has any more right to maintain a public nuisance than a private citizen. If the latter were to empty the garbage or ashes in front of his house he would be ordered by the first policeman that happened along to remove it at once or be subject to prosecution in the police court. Stabling four horses in front of a private residence from early morning till late at night is a nuisance infinitely more aggra-

What is of interest, however, is the circumstance that it should require more than a week before the Commissioners or their law officer take cognizance of this plain violation of law. Why did not the police in this instance notify the company to abate the nuisance, and, if they failed to do so, bring the responsible officials into the police court to answer for their offense? It is an outrage upon the whole neighbor-

Now that the Commissioners have been officially notified that the company is violating a municipal ordinance, it is to be assumed that they will issue prompt orders to Maj. Moore to take steps to relieve the residents of O street and keep the Belt Line Company within the law.

STRIKE AT THE FOUNTAIN HEAD.

It is worse than useless to ceusure Jackson City and Rosslyn without condemning the place that brought them into existence. The fountain-head of crime, the feeder of these notorious dens of in fomy, is the outlaw race track. It is this resort for criminals and toughs that furnishes patrons to the saloons and gamb ling holes of Jackson City and Rosslyn, and when once abolished those places would cease to exist. The worst phase of the question is the apparent connivance of Alexandria county authorities with the outlaw track, No effort is made to suppress its lawlessness, or to make pretense of enforcing the law. Gambling, illegal liquor selfing, robbery, confidence crookedness and other species of crime are even encouraged, and the better element of the county em helpless onlookers. It is reported that Gov. O'Ferrall is a candidate for United States Senator. If true be could do nothing more popular than to exterminate the outlaw track and its victous following. Gov. Matthews, of Indiana, has made himself a possible candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination by his vigorous prosecution of the Roby outlaw track, which is sufficient evidence, if Gov. O'Ferrall needs it, that the general publie is opposed to such lawleseness. An effort should be made to call Gov.

O'Ferrall's attention to the disgraceful condition of affairs across the river.

THIS COUNTRY WILL PARTICIPATE. Information comes to-day that the Ori ental peace treaty has been modified so that the trade privileges obtained by Japan will apply toali powers coming under the favorednation clause. If true, this will include all important commercial countries and secure for Japan an immediate ratification of the treaty. The attitude of Germany, England and Russia on this important question must have brought about this concession, and it shows how quick these countries resent an er eronchment on their commercial rights. To make a people prosperous something must be done to enlarge their markets, and the United States will have to adopt that policy before she can enjoy the fullest benefit of our great resources.

Only twenty-eight days remain in which to get a splendid book by subscribing for The Times.

Delaware is a little State, but it has an awful long legislature.

The upward turn of teef ought to see the Trust well roasted.

The fact that all Chicago newspapers are Republican will not discourage the Altgeldt Democracy.

Before Secretary Gresham can be sure of his correspondence the White House transfer station must be abolished. It is suspected that the Thurston letter was sidetracked there.

This year the campaign of education begins where Cougress left off and is sure to continue the financial muddle.

When wheeling is hard most fair bi cyclists aspire to both bloomers and pauts. One for convenience sake and the other because they can't help it.

The demand for the gift books of The Times far exceeds expectations. It is not often that a newspaper makes such a liberal offer and the Washington public is not slow to accept it. With every new subscription between now and May 20, 1895, The Times will give one of its 50 cent bound books. See catalogue and send in your subscription.

AS THE CROWDS COME OUT.

A well filled house greeted Ada Rehan and her company at the new National Theater last night. The play was an adaptation from the German of Stobsteer by Augustin Daly, entitled "Love on Cratches." Miss Rehan as Annis Austin, a misunderstood wife, was, as usual, fascinating to a high degree. She combines more than any other actress those qualities of voice and gosture that win sympathy and interest in the most trivial thirg she does.

As Annis Austin she has ample oppor tunity for the portrayal of those little coquetries that rescinate the auditor and make the man in the front row wish he was playing the "opposite lend" to her, if only for a moment. Her voice, which has been written about so much, could not be more silvery than the metal in which she was immortalized by Montana at the World's Fair.

The comedy is bright and brisk in action and is full of laughable complications. which were well brought out by a carefully which were well drought out by a carefully selected company. Frank Worthing, as Sydney Austin, played the part created by John Drew when he was leading man in Daly's company, and played it well. Mss Sybil Carliste, as Margery Gwinn, a widow, was vivacious and sweet. Since er last visit to Washington Miss Rehan's Titing red hair has undergone a percep-tible charge and now appeared as a halo of sun-kissed corn.

splendid creations of Worth. It was simplicity itself and yet simplicity of the most splendid kind. It was white satin of such richness, that as gleams of light fell upon it from the open windows, it shone like burnished silver. The skirt was fashloned quite plainly in front, with the grace and elegance of a full court train at the back.

The high neck corsage was trimmed with rarest old point lace that had been worn by the bride smother at her marriage to Mr. Leiter in 1866. The tulle veil, which completely enveloped the wedding gown and fell to the edge of the train, was trimmed about the upper portion with the rose point lace that had served this same

These consisted of a coronet of magnificent stones holding in place the wedding veil that floated down completely enveloping the splendid gown to the very edge of the court train, and left the bride's face entirely free, to the very evident satisfaction of the guests gathered within the church.

SCARSDALE FAMILY JEWELS. At either side of the head catching the veil further back were two diamond stars given the bride by her sisters. The magnificent necklace of diamonds that encircled the bride's throat and fell with numerous dazzling pendants half way down the front of her corsage was also part of the Scarsdale family jewels. In place of the conventional bouquet the bride carried a prayer book bound in white leather, from which the marriage service was read.

Bishop Talbot, of Wyoming, assisted by Archdeason Mackay Smith, performed the marriage service, the bishop pronounc-ing the benediction at the close of the

Along the driveway outside the house spring flowers were massed in gorgeous profu-sion, so that without as well as within the place was in wedding attire for the bride and groom who yesterday began their married life under such auspicious cir-

SCENES AT THE HOME. Within the house the spacious marble hallways were decorated by Small with great branches of apple and cherry blosoms, while trees of magnolia in full bloom stood about in the corners and niches. In the window ledges and along the marble railings were brilliant band tulips, hyaciaths, daffedlis, and illes, that filled the a.r with their sweetness.

The bride and groom received in the Empire drawing room, standing before the immense only fireplace. This was completely concealed by a massing of maidenhair ferns, from which hung myrisds of delicate pink orchids, the same flowers callier from the mark leaves to a tring of deficate pink oremas, the same flowers falling from the upper ledge in a fringe of color that fairly seemed alive as if quivared with every slightest current of air. Beneath the life-sized portrait of the bride, painted some years ago by Cabanei, was a mound of English forget me nots that made a beautiful bit of color and vas suggestive of the end of pomartie force.

thought of the end of tomantic fere-thought on the part of those having the decorations in charge.

The wedding breakfast was served in the white and gold ballroom opening out from this drawing-room, as the dhing-room ordinarily used at entertainments was to-day considered insufficient to accommodate the guests invited to the wedding break fast. One would think that there was little, if anything new in the way of decora-

SUPERB FLORAL DECORATIONS. Rising from either side of the main table to the ceiling, and thus completely covering the walls, spread out the gorgeous Bougan viilia vine, its magenta blossoms so thickly clustered as to give the impression of a great wave of color having swept over the ornate department. The floral decorations of the table consisted of three ellipses of

Beneath one of the archways with the finded gilded columns on either side and a background of maldenhair ferns was the large weedding cake. This was set in a wreath of the lilies of the valley, surrounded in turn by a larger wreath of white-orchids. After the guests had extended their congratulations and good wiskes for all manner gratifallons and good wisses for all manner of never-ending happiness, many of them were asked into the library, where they inscribed their signatures upon the marriage certificate of parchment, at the top of which were the monograms of the bride and groom, Mrs. Cleveland's name was the first to be inscribed, and after her the Cabinet pres-ont stepad their names. ent signed their names

MRS. CLEVELAND AND RUTH. Mrs. Cleveland was accompanied by her little daughter Ruth to the wedding, and later to the breakfast. This fact was known to comparatively few persons in the church, as while Mrs. Cleveland was es corted down one aisie, the President's little daughter, in a costume of rose pink, was taken down the opposite aisie by her two nurses. As this is the first occasion on which the child has attended any pub-lic gathering or indeed entertainment of any kind outside of the Cabinet circle, it marks quite an epoch in the little maid's calendar.

There was another little girl who, yes-There was another little gift who, yes-terday, for the first time, attended a wed-ding. This was Margaret Bissell, daughter of the ex-Postmaster General. Between Mrs. Leiter and Mrs. Bissell there has existed a friendship that dates back of the latter's coming to Washington. It is, in fact, a life-long friendship, Mrs. Leiter having been one of the guests at the marriage of Mrs.

Bissel's parents.

When, at the conclusion of all the wedding festivities, the bride and groom drove away to take the train for their wedding trip and the house company, together with the other guests, crowded about the doorway to call out the last good wishes and throw ice and guesas, crowing about the noorway to can out the last good wishes and throw rice and flowers in their wake, Mrs. Curzon wore a going-away gown of blue crepon, with a large hat to match, and the perfection of Worth's confections in the shape of a little wrap.

LIGHTS IN THE CLUBHOUSE.

Legal Dispute Between the Metropolita and the Electric Lighting Company. The Metropolitan Club, with elegant and luxurious quarters at Seventeenth and H streets northwest, is having trouble with the United States Electric Lighting Company. Its acting president, Gen. J. M. Schofield, and secretary, Arnold Hayne, yesterday brought suit against the company, upor permission by Judge Cox paid into the reg istry of court $395.16 due and obtained an order forbidding the company from deprey-ing the club of its electric current until the dispute is settled.

The club made a contract with the company

The club made a contract with the company of January 16, 1888, by which it was to pay $1.521.15 a year in monthly installments for 200 electric lights of 16-camile power. nd was to have furnished at the same rat ditional lights for any extension of the ibhouse. These figures represent an ad-nce of 10 per cent, over the club's gas bill for 1887. It was agreed that the club should put into the building wires, etc., for the use of the lights, and that the contract should run after the first year subject to cancellation by the clab, but not by the company. The bill filed yesterday by Messrs, Carlisie & Johnson, as attorneys for the club, says they have used the light for seven years says they have used the right for seven years under this contract, and, though the com-puny has often sought to have the agreement cancelled and another substituted, the club-ins always refused and still refuses to give up its rights under it.

The company has threatened to cut off the current on the ground that the club fittied to pay its bills for March and April on the to pay its bills for March and April on the 1st of the month. But the bills never have been paid enrier than the 4th of the month, and have often ran to the end. The club has offered to pay the bills. Upon this showing the court is asked to Argument on the Gray Verdict.

The appeal of the District against $4,500 verdict in favor of Edwin N. Gray the foundryman, for damage to his works on Maine avenue by the overflow of a sewer, as argued in the court of appeals yesterday that the overflow was the act of God, mas-much as a rain storm and a high tide olued to cause the overflow. Judge ere Wilson and Mr. Randall Hagner ar-Jere Wilson and Mr. Kandad Hagner ar-gued that there was only a half tide, as shown by the testimony of Admiral Ram-sey, who was at the foot of the street on the ship Dale, and that the sewer was obstructed for lack of cleaning.

Your entire satisfaction is the first law of our business. We'll do anything within reason to please you in every instance-nomatter what it costs us. Good Clothing never was so cheap as now. For instance our $10 suits. A few years ago we'd been glad to sell you as good for $15--but "time changes all things "-then we were simply retailers-now we are manufacturers as well. Everybody's claiming the best $10 suits. Who's wrong? Look at 'em all and find out. We have fifty styles at this price-including the Black Clays-Cheviots-and Serges. Try us once.

RECEIVER ASKED FOR.

Also Suit for Attachment of the Person of W. J. Costello. Mr. W. J. Costello, who for several years kept the saloon and eating house at Sixth and G streets northwest, has been niled upon to answer a motion for a receiver for his property and attachment for his person. The motion was made yesterday by Thomas M. Fields, as attorney for Schwartz, Mansbach & Co., of Phila-delphia, and is a step in the equity suit recently brought by the same firm against Mr. Costello to recover judgment for $717. An amended bill was also filed yesterday in the same sait. William Lacaban & Son, Edwin Forrest, Theodore Fischer, ant bought from R. Rothschild & Co. $2,671 | American Security & Trust Copayment. These notes are now held Schwartz, Mausbach & Co. In 1893 Banking House 1140 15th

by Schwartz, Mausbach & Co. In 1893 Mr. Costello gave trusts upon his property to Messrs. Forrest and Fischer nod to William Lanahan & Sen.

These trusts, the bill declares, are fraudulent, in that Mr. Costello is authorized to retain possession of the goods. The goods remain at his place of business, No. 504 G street, but as Mr. Cestello does not lease the place they are subject to removal at any time, and that argainst his will. This danger is increased by the facts that he is muleited to excessive use of intexicants and is not on good terms of intexicants and is not on good terms ne members of his family who ive at his home.

A receiver is asked for, together with an accounting, a declaration against the validity of the trusts, and a sale of the property.
